D'PAUW DEFEATS EARLHAM TEAM

THE METHODISTS SUCCEEDED IN GAME OF BASKETBALL AT INDIANAPOLIS.

PLAYED A STEADY GAME

In one of the fastest basketball contests that has been seen at Indianapolis for some time DePauw defeated Earlham by a 21-to-22 score at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday. Though the strong Quaker team started the game with a rush and chalked up several goals before its opponents knew what had happened as soon as the Methodists got started the tide was turned.

During the early stages of the game both teams appeared to have an even chance for victory, but the superior passing of the DePauw men proved to be too much for their opponents, and before the first session was completed, the Greencastle collegians had demonstrated their superiority over their rival five.

The feature of the game was the team work of the DePauw quintet. Time after time, by careful passing and floor play, the Methodists were enabled to carry the ball from one end of the floor to the other, eliciting the opposing guards and tucking the ball safely within the netting.

Earlham frequently was successful in carrying the ball down the floor, but continually lost possession of it when under the basket.

The work of Dale, DePauw's mid-guard forward, frequently approached the sensational, while Hardin's work under the Earlham basket was goal getting on the part of the Quakers a difficult task.

For the Earlhamites Mote was by far the best man, scoring most of the field goals registered by the Richmond quintet, while Hughes, at guard, played a steady game throughout the contest. The lineup and summary:

DePauw (21) Earlham (22)
Crick Forward Rees
Dale Forward Conrad

Grady Center Mote
Hardin Guard Furnas
Walker Guard Hughes
Field goals—Crick 5, Dale 6, Walker 2, Conrad 1, Mote 5, Frazier 2, Foul goals—Crick 5, Rees 2, Conrad 4. Time of halves—20 minutes. Referee—Diddel, Wabash.

WOULD-BE ENUMERATORS

More Than a Hundred Applicants For Twenty-One Positions.

More than one hundred applicants for the positions of enumerators for the census to be taken this year in Putnam County were on hand at the court house Saturday morning to take the examination. Putnam County is entitled to twenty-one enumerators and there being over a hundred after the place, some eighty of them will have taken the test in vain.

The examination did not come under the civil service rules, as the questions propounded were those that had to do with matters that would likely come up in the taking of the census. District Superintendent S. J. Wilton and his assistant D. C. Hughes had charge of the examination.

SUPREME COURT RECORD

21424. Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company vs. Alvah B. Smith, Putnam C. C. Appellee's petition for writ of certiorari are for the purpose of writ of certiorari granted.

This is a case wherein Alvah B. Smith of Hendricks County was given a judgment for $9,500 in a law suit that grew out of condemnation proceedings brought by the Big Four railway. The road wanted to give Smith $2,500 for his land while Smith asked $10,000. Upon the Putnam Circuit Court finding for Smith the Big Four appealed the case. The writs of certiorari are for the purpose of requiring the clerk of the lower court to furnish additional records in the case.

The Beechwood Pleasant Circle met Thursday with Mrs. P. W. McNary. A paper on Robert Burns was read by Mrs. May Hammond and later discussed by the club. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

EARLHAM WINS THE ORATORICAL

DePAUW TAKES THIRD PLACE IN CONTEST OF WORDS AT INDIANAPOLIS.

NOTRE DAME TAKES SECOND

Although DePauw was successful in the basketball game at Indianapolis yesterday, she was again unfortunate in the oratorical contest, allowing both Earlham and Notre Dame to outrank us in one of the best contests held in years. The ruling of Judge Elam placing Gephart's manuscript in sixth place while the two other judges gave him second and third, is largely responsible for DePauw not getting second, although victory is not begrudged to Earlham.

Levi P. Pennington who is a senior at Earlham was the successful contestant, with Francis J. Weininger of Notre Dame taking second.

A logical and well-balanced discussion of "The Evolution of World Peace" won for Pennington the prize that was awarded him and his college. Weininger, the Notre Dame orator, captured the large audience which greeted the speakers as well as the judges and they sat throughout his twenty-minute address with the closest attention.

Pennington's description of battle field scenes was picturesque, and his argument for the world's disarmament was altogether logical. He looked ahead into the future and saw an era when the differences between two nations would be settled by arbitration instead of by armed force, and a time when the money that it takes to carry on war would be used in the building of educational institutions.

Warfare and peace was a popular topic with the orators. Weininger, the Notre Dame speaker, had for his subject, "Reason vs. Force" and R. S. Dobbins, representing Franklin College, spoke on "The Problem of the World's Peace." Each of these three speakers occasionally crossed another's path in the general trend of their thought, although each of discussions was free from any similarity so far as their actual oration was concerned. Weininger's personality is that of the practiced and trained orator, and he was by far more at ease than any of the other speakers in the contest.

When Weininger arose to speak he stood for several seconds without uttering a word, and for an instant the audience feared that he had forgotten the first sentence of his oration. His friends were soon reassured, however, because his voice was firm and he was as natural as could be when he began speaking. He began his oration with the simple sentence "Life is the most sacred thing on earth." He then proceeded with a well-balanced and rather picturesque discussion of the world's wars. Once he admitted that it could not be denied that wars had done some good, but the good has cost human life. He presented some rather startling information when he declared that there has been enough people killed in wars since civilization began to populate ten worlds such as this one.

"Class Rule and Popular Sovereignty" was the subject of the oration delivered by Alva Roscoe Gephart of DePauw. The judges gave him two first and a fourth place on manuscript and a second, one third and sixth place on delivery.

Fred C. Mills, representing Hanover College, spoke on "Our Nation Tomorrow." D. Somner Robinson, representing Butler, spoke on "The Diplomacy of Democracy," and Hinkle C. Hays of Wabash spoke on "The Nation's Greatest Evil." The latter subject was directed against the liquor traffic, and the speaker recommended the strictest kind of regulation on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages.

DePauw was represented by the largest of any of the colleges sending representatives to the contest. Before the speaking began and while the judges were deciding on the winners the DePauw delegation entertained the audience with its college yells and other forms of amusement. Wabash, Butler, Hanover, Notre Dame, Franklin and Earlham also had large delegations.

The judges were not long in reaching a decision on the merits of the orations. In less than fifteen minutes after Pennington, the winner and the last speaker, had finished, the announcement was made. The judges on manuscript were Prof. C. M. Halliday, University of Illinois; Prof. Pal Reinsch, University of Wisconsin; Prof. Arthur E. Phillips of the Phillips School of Oratory, Chicago. The judges on decision were John B. Elam, Indianapolis; Prof. G. W. Knight, Ohio State University; Charles F. Williams, Indianapolis.

The markings were as follows:

Judges	Earlham	Notre Dame	DePauw	Wabash	Butler	Franklin	Hanover
Halliday	1	2	2	4	6	5	7
Reinsch	1	5	2	3	4	6	7
Phillips	2	5	4	1	3	6	7

The crowd that gathered last evening to listen to the closing address of Mr. Todd was well repaid for their attendance. Mr. Todd gave one of the most impressive addresses which the people have yet heard. It was on "Pastor and People," and the force of his work stirred up the hearts of all members of the church. It would have been a good thing indeed if all the members of all the churches in Greencastle could have been there.

CLOSING ADDRESS OF MR. TODD

Mr. Todd's work in this community has quickened the Christian life of this community, and all Christian people are thankful for what he has done. The revival must not cease—tomorrow should be a day of great power and inspiration.

The following are the names of those who will be in our chorus tomorrow under the direction of Mr. Wilton. The platform will now seat 50. He wishes every member in the church to be present.

D'PAUW ALUMNUS IS PRESIDENT

ANOTHER NAME ADDED TO THE LONG ROLL OF DePAUW GRADUATES WHO HAVE REACHED THE HIGHEST EDUCATIONAL POSITION.

GRADUATED HERE IN 1902

Word has just been received here of the election of Centenary College, Tennessee, of Charles W. Cook, a DePauw man of the class of 1902. Mr. Cook was graduated at DePauw with high honors, and later entered the ministry, having an appointment in Indianapolis. Later still he went to Texas, where he was unusually successful.

He has given considerable attention to educational work, and his acceptance of the leadership of Centenary College will give him a broad field, and his friends expect that he will soon make an enviable name for himself.

ABOUT THE SHOW

Editor Herald:
My attention has been called to an item in your Wednesday's issue concerning the "Moulin Rouge Burlesque Company" which appeared at the Opera House Tuesday night, in which it is stated that I "in order to ascertain the real character of the show, entered the hall while it was going on, to find that the performance was all right, being a truly high class burlesque." The necessary implication being that the show met with my approval.

Such, however, was not the case. I considered the show pernicious, and so expressed myself at the time to a number of persons. The audience was small, composed entirely of men and boys, and I deem any entertainment which a man would be unwilling to take his wife or daughter in its influences. I am confident the management of the Opera House will not permit any exhibitions in the future as I happen to know that the contract with the troupe was for a clean show.

NO FOUNDATION FOR THE RUMOR

REPORT HAD IT THAT MR. LOCKRIDGE HAD THE POSTOFFICE "CINCHED."

THEY MAY GET TOGETHER

Some very interesting rumors were afloat on the streets of Greencastle Friday in regard to the postoffice appointment. According to these rumors A. O. Lockridge had been given the appointment and all other candidates were out of the running. Investigation showed that the rumor was without reasonable foundation and while the friends of Mr. Lockridge are insisting that he has as good a chance as anyone and better than some, nothing definite has been given out to indicate that he has the appointment "cinched."

Just how the rumor was started is not known. It is claimed by friends of other aspirants for the postoffice that it was started by one of Mr. Lockridge's friends who was so confident of his chances that he was willing to bet a large sum of money that he would be the man. As nobody would "cover" the bet, someone became imbued with the idea that everything was settled in favor of Mr. Lockridge and started talk to that effect.

An effort is being made, it is said, among the other candidates to get together on Mr. Lockridge as against Mr. Torr, it being admitted for the past few days that the race has been going on largely in the latter's direction. It is now Torr against the field. Whether this arrangement can be made is yet to be seen. It is simply a question of whether or not the other candidates can renounce their own claims and get together on Zels' friends say, "Why not get together on Zels?" and Smith's friends say "Why not get together on Smith?" and so on. This effort is also thought to have been largely responsible for the rumor.

A marriage license has been issued to John R. Hammond of Greencastle and Miss Joy Dell Day of Cloverdale.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S IDEA.

At a recent dinner in Illinois, Speaker Cannon was spoken of by a friend, who wished to be unusually loyal, as the "Alexander Hamilton of the present time." We are inclined to think that not only Cannon but Aldrich, Taft and Sherman, to say nothing of Hitchcock, have the Alexander Hamilton idea. Hamilton was a foe to popular government. He believed that the people were not capable of governing themselves. Like Ruskin and Carlyle, he disliked very much the idea of the masses of the people having any control of governmental matters. He believed that the president and senators should be elected for life and the governors of the states appointed by the central government. Mr. Taft and Mr. Sherman have inherited this low estimate of the people as a mass without the idea of the responsibility of the ruler which was united with it in Hamilton. President Taft's attitude toward the public is seen in his position on the tariff bill. He went through the west with the idea that when he said it was a good bill, the people, like dutiful children, would be to good mannered to contradict, and that the dictum would restore harmony to the party. It was one of the greatest shocks of Mr. Taft's life to find that the people of the west would contradict, and in a very forcible manner. Mr. Sherman has insinuated from the first that nothing was so laughable as the idea of the rule of the people. They were, in his mind, not capable of rule, not versed in ruling, not sure of what they wanted. We are thankful that even the friends of the administration can see so clearly the attitude of some of the administration heads. Soon it may be clear to all of us.

SAVED FROM AWFUL PERIL.

"I never felt so near my grave," writes Lewis Chamblin, of Manchester, Ohio, R. R. No. 3, "as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 115 pounds in spite of many remedies and the best doctors. And that I am alive today is due largely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I am well and weigh 160 pounds and can work hard. It also cured my four children of croup, and is the most certain remedy for La Grippe, Asthma, desperate lung trouble and all bronchial affections, 50c and $1.00. A trial bottle free. Guaranteed by the Owl Drug Store and the Red Cross Drug Store."

On the Safe Side.
"When I know a friend is on the water wagon I don't urge him to have a drink."
"Neither do I: I invite him to a wine supper. Nothing like being lavish when they're not going to call on you."—Pittsburg Post.

An attack of grip is often followed by a persistent cough, which to many proves a great annoyance. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been extensively used and with good success for the relief and cure of this cough. Many cases have been cured after all other remedies had failed. Sold by all dealers.

The Next Call.

Mrs. Sharpley—Next time you call I want you to give your opinion of the new dog we are going to get.
Mr. Bore—Delightful, I'm sure. When do you expect it?
Mrs. Sharpley—Oh, not for twelve months at least!

A Notre Dame Lady's Appeal

A SOLDIER LOVER.

In a trip abroad in search of health I found myself one day in the company of an old friend, who insisted upon my spending a few months with him in the Riviera. The palace he had taken was furnished elaborately. On the first floor was a chapel separated from the main building by a dreary, dimly lighted hall.

As I was strolling through the lower floor of the house one afternoon in October I opened the chapel door, and as I did so I heard a movement. Suddenly a shadow darkened the narrow beam of light that fell from the only window in the wall. My first impulse was to call out, but I kept silent, and after carefully glancing around for a moment walked out and shut the door behind me.

When my friend returned from his drive I told him of my discovery, but he said it was all imagination.

Determined to solve the mystery the next afternoon, I took Antonio, my friend's servant, gave him a lantern and putting a revolver into my pocket, started again for the chapel. As we approached the door Antonio talked very loudly, asserting over and over that there was nobody within. Going inside we looked thoroughly, but found nothing.

Next day my friend and I watched Antonio, and saw him carrying food to the chapel. Cautiously we followed, and after a few minutes opened the door and found him talking to as handsome a young man as one would care to see. The change that came over the stranger's face as we stood there was startling. He popped to his feet instantly and stood for a moment motionless as though he were gazing upon an apparition. Quickly recovering himself he cast a glance upon Antonio, whose face grew livid at his complete detection. The young man forgot his own danger and burst forth in an earnest appeal for Antonio, who stood as one completely dazed.

A few words from my friend served to relieve the situation, and we found that the young man was a fugitive from France. He had deserted from the army, where he had served two years. The case was pathetic. His sweetheart, Annette, was taken dangerously ill after their engagement and thinking she was going to die Pierre had gone to her home at the risk of his own life. This desperate measure had been refused by his officers.

As soon as Annette was stronger Pierre decided to leave the country, but where to go was a question. He gradually worked his way to Genoa and, knowing that Antonio, an old friend, was not far away, had looked him up. Antonio had concealed him in the deserted chapel. The soldier had been there two weeks when we discovered his hiding place.

Through the efforts of my friend and his wife Annette's parents were prevailed upon to send the girl to Italy to be married. The day of her arrival was an event to Pierre. He and Annette sobbed on each other's necks while expressions of affection were mingled in indistinct murmurs. Without delay they were married, and we gave them a great wedding feast in the big old dining room. It was only a short while after that they sailed for America, carrying letters to some of our friends in New York.

Where Stilts are Used for Work Instead of Play.

How often, says a writer in the Strand, an invention which at first was merely a plaything of youth has been adopted for utilitarian purposes? Stilts are usually associated with a boy or with the clown at a circus, but some years since a Kentish farmer conceived the idea of putting them to a useful purpose by using them as a step-ladder by which to reach the top of the hop-poles for fixing or repairing the wires which are now so extensively used by hop-growers. In the hop districts at certain times of the year numbers of men may be seen at work apparently in mid-air.

A Good Verdict.

Fargo, N. D., once boasted a composite postmaster and coroner. He was called one day to give a verdict upon the case of a stranger who had been the victim of a fit on the main street. As the man was known to nobody he was hurried to the much-prized new city hospital. There the case was diagnosed as appendicitis, but when the operation took place the attending surgeon discovered that the patient had been previously relieved of his appendix. The doctor endeavored to retract his steps, but the strange man died from the effects of the operation.

The postmaster-cornor, in rendering his verdict, filled in the space after "Cause of Death" with a rubber stamp which read "Opened by Mistake."—Chicago Journal.

Take Your Choice.

"Home is where the heart is," so the poets say. But some declare that home is where the grouse is on display.

Bess (yearningly)—Tell me, Frank, do you really and truly love me, darling?

Frank (meanly)—I certainly did when I told you so for the five-thousandth time six seconds ago; but now—well, you know, we men are so changeable!—Bohemian.

Profits in Stock.

Money put in good stock will double itself, while money put in a poorer breed melts away. We know a man who has a Shorthorn cow that cost him $75. The former owner did not recognize the marks of good blood in the animal, but the other fellow did. That cow has made him $4,000 in seven years and is still working for him. He sold one of the calves for $755 and another for $500. Four years ago he bought another for $225. He has sold three of her calves for $1,100. It takes some brains to run this business.

Studying Your Cows.

An excellent and careful dairyman who has fifty-two excellent cows, says that he knows every one of them by their voices in lowing, in daylight and dark. One who is so familiar with his cows as that is sure always to make a success of his business, which this dairyman does. He can tell what they want and what their needs are when each one lows, and they know just as well that their wants will be supplied.

Gleanings.

Celeriac is a plant similar to celery, but more easily grown and more easily cooked.

There are few times of the year when a good pair of pruning shears can not be used to good advantage.

When a better price for better fruit is obtained, the difference in price pays for handling. It pays to grow the best for that reason.

BETTY'S INVITATION

"I met McBrier on the street today. Betty," said the married big brother who wants everybody he loves to be married, too. "Say, there's a fine fellow. He asked very particularly after you. Said he had been thinking for a long time that he'd invite you out to some public entertainment."

"I hope you didn't go on your knees and beg him to hurry," returned Betty, nonchalantly. "When he has made it a subject of prayerful consideration a few years longer maybe the news of his intentions will reach me by a more direct line. Meanwhile, I can wait."

Big brother looked discouraged, and the subject of McBrier dropped. A month passed. Then, "Say, Betty, began the brother again, "I finished with McBrier today and he asked to be remembered to you. He wanted to know if I thought you'd do anything so unconventional as to dine with him at one of the amusement gardens and spend the evening there."

"And you told him—?"

"Why, I said I thought you would."

"Oh! You ought to have told him that I had a distant cousin in Texas who might be able to supply him with the desired information."

"Now, Betty! He talks to me like a brother. He doesn't think I'm going to come and tell you."

Then the weeks went on again and nothing was heard from McBrier beyond the periodical warnings brought in from time to time by big brother. "Oh, Betty," he would say, "I ran into McBrier at the club today. He asked me specially whether you were fond of light opera." Or, "By the way, Betty, McBrier was in the office. Sent his regards. He wanted to know whether you enjoyed rowing."

The matter had become a family byword and everybody in the house—even the two girl cousins who were visiting Betty when the crisis came—knew her feelings on the subject.

"I never heard of anything so ridiculous in my life," she was telling her cousins one evening, just after another of big brother's messages. "If Mr. Mc-

He Talks Like a Brother

Brier ever should do anything so rash as actually to invite me somewhere, the suddenness of it would be so great a shock that I wouldn't be able to go—hat's one thing certain! It's the most absurd."

At that very instant McBrier's card was presented to her.

"Horror! He's actually here! What had I do? You must come down with me, girls."

"Deed we won't," they giggled. "We're going to listen at the balcony and hear you crush him!"

"Well, you aren't! I shall take him out on the porch where you can't hear."

"Sinners! You won't dare," said Betty over her shoulder as she fluttered down the stairs. But she feared they would; so she led her guest into the reception room and sat in a chair facing the door and set him the example of speaking in low tones. It did no good. He spoke as if he were delivering a public oration, and Betty shivered in apprehension every time a new subject was started.

For half an hour they talked commonplace. Then he hesitated. "I wonder if it would be presuming, Miss Betty—" he began.

Immediately there was a rustle in the hall window.

"Oh, see, there goes a balloon over that house!" cried Betty, with the excitement of a 4-year-old. It had suddenly occurred to her that McBrier was a very nice man and that he probably hadn't realized how many times he had spoken of this invitation, and that if it weren't for those miserable girls who were listening she might—well, anyway, she had forgotten all those crushing remarks she had intended making.

"I wonder if I might ask—" he began again.

"Listen!" she cried. "Excuse me, but I thought it was our telephone bell."

"I was only going to ask if it would trouble you to give me a drink of water."

"Oh!" gasped Betty, and then they both heard a strange commotion in the window seat in the hall.

"Is that the dog?" asked McBrier. "No—er—very likely. I'll see!"

"Let me see," and McBrier started for the door.

"Thank you," said Betty. "In the meantime, I'll get the water."

There was nothing at all in the window seat, but something was heard whisking up the stairs; so he went back to the porch to meditate.

Better was gone some time, and just what happened after she came back no one positively knows, because she won't tell. All the girls could hear was one remark:

"Delightful, I'm sure. But I really think I ought to have saved the answer and sent it to you by my brother, some time next month!"—Chicago News.

Truth About Catarrh

Catarrh can never be cured by taking medicines into the stomach nor by sprays, atomizers or douches. Intelligent physicians have long ago discarded such ideas and not one of them would be worth consideration if it were not for the fact that unscrupulous persons prey upon the ignorance of the people in regard to new discoveries.

Catarrh is caused by germs and just as long as these germs thrive in the folds, crevices, nook and corners of the mucous membrane that line the nose, throat and chest, just so long will you have catarrh.

There is only one way to cure catarrh, and that is to kill the germs. There is only one remedy that will kill the germs when it gets where the germs are, and that is Hyomei.

Hyomei is made chiefly from Australian Eucalyptus and Eucalyptol combined with other germ killing antiseptics. Just breathe it in through the hard rubber inhaler that comes with each outfit and relief is immediate. Used regularly for a few weeks Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mey) will cure chronic catarrh. Complete outfit at the Owl Drug Store and the Red Cross Pharmacy and leading druggists everywhere.

MI-ONA Cures Indigestion

It relieves stomach misery, sour stomach, belching, and cures all stomach diseases or more back. Large bottle, 50 cents. Druggists in all towns.

WON'T NEED A CRUTCH.
When Editor J. P. Sossman, of Cornelius, N. C., bruised his leg badly, it started an ugly sore. Many salves and ointments proved worthless. Then Bucklin's Arnica Salve healed it thoroughly. Nothing is so prompt and sure for Ulcers, Boils, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Corns, Sores, Eruptions, Eczema or Piles, 25c at the Owl Drug Store and the Red Cross Drug Store.

A Startling Greeting.
In Morocco foreigners are saluted by the Moors on horseback in a manner which may well startle those unaccustomed to it. The Moor rides full speed toward the stranger as if to run him down. He then suddenly stops and discharges his pistol over his head.

Do you know that croup can be prevented? Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It is also a certain cure for croup and has never been known to fail. Sold by all dealers.

ADVERTISE IT IN THE HERALD.

When John Chetwynd Stood to Lose.

By H. SIDNEY WARWICK.

That afternoon, as he sat in his study, Jack Chetwynd told himself that life had no more to offer him in the way of opportunities. The ball was at his feet. The realization of his two ambitions seemed within his easy grasp; he was soon to marry the woman whom he loved heart and soul, and he felt practically assured that he would head the poll in the election he was contesting.

On the stepping stones of his ability and the influence at his command John Chetwynd felt that no political position was beyond his powers of achievement.

"Yes, my chance is coming," he said to himself with a satisfied smile. "Won't I make things hum, as we used to say out West?"

As he uttered these words a visitor was inquiring for Mr. Chetwynd. "The gentleman won't give his name, sir," said the man-servant, "but he says he's an old acquaintance of yours and his business is urgent."

"It is really surprising how many old acquaintances a man who has got on finds he possesses," remarked Chetwynd cynically; "and they are invariably hard-up. Some beggar come to sponge, I suppose."

"He is quite respectably dressed, sir, though I don't say that his clothes look as though they'd been cut in Bond Street," quoth Dobson, who was a somewhat privileged person.

"Well, show the man in."

With an air of being busily engaged over some papers, Mr. John Chetwynd waited indifferently enough for the entrance of the man who would not give his name, nor did the blank look on his face change as his eyes fell upon the man; but his indifference was only assumed.

For the visitor seemed to bring into the room a startling echo of his past life—the wild, reckless career of his early manhood, when he was scattering his wild oats with a prodigal hand.

"Well, John Chetwynd, as you call yours 'I now' is the greeting of the 'old acquaintance,' as they were left alone together.

There was an unpleasant smile on his face as he spoke.

"A name, I may remark, that I am perfectly entitled to bear," murmured Chetwynd, with an easy carelessness of manner that was strangely out of harmony with his real feelings.

"I knew you by another name in America, at any rate. You remember me, I suppose?"

There was an undertone of intense malice in the man's words.

"Perfectly. You were a very bad lot, George Hurst, and my bitter enemy ever since the day I caught you cheating over the pasteboards and exposed you."

"It was a bad day's work for you. I have never forgiven you. I never will. They nearly lynched me, and a thing like that keeps a man's memory green. I hold you in the hollow of my hand."

"It seems hardly worth while to have troubled me with a matter of so little interest, doesn't it?" was Jack Chetwynd's reply.

He was lighting a cigarette as he spoke. There was nothing in his voice to indicate that he had an almost overpowering inclination to throw the man out of the house. But his face was as impassive as marble as he rang for the servant to show the visitor the door.

And as George Hurst left, Chetwynd knew that he was a ruined man.

One night years ago John Chetwynd had shot a man dead in a gambling saloon in San Francisco. The tragedy was an accident, but the moment he realized what he had done Chetwynd lost his head. On a mad impulse, he at once bolted in the confusion that ensued; by sheer luck he managed to get clear away.

When it was too late he cursed himself for not having had the pluck to stand his trial; had he done this he could doubtless have cleared himself, but his flight looked like damning evidence of deliberate murder.

And the future? What would happen when the story of that fatal act and his flight from justice was published in that rag that fattened on unsavory scandals, the Vulture?

How the story would spread! A murderer contesting a seat in the House! Truly a spicy paragraph for every paper in the kingdom!

And the woman he loved—that proud, beautiful woman who was to have been the spur to goad him on to the heights of success, the partner in his triumphs! He must give her up.

Meanwhile the editor of the Vulture was driving in a hansom to one of the N. W. suburbs, vastly pleased with himself.

"He knows it means ruin; he must know, though he took it so coolly." And the ex-swindler pictured to himself the stir his story would make. "Won't there be a rush for the Vulture, that's all!"

might even have called her handsome still, despite the premature wrinkles and the hard look about the mouth. Her face had no warmth in it as she spoke, but Hurst's lit up with a radiance that told its own story.

He loved this woman madly—it was the only unselfish trait in his nature, his love for her whom he was to marry.

"Such good news, Ethel!" he exclaimed.

"Well?" The question was asked almost indifferently.

"My chance has come! Although I've only been on the Vulture a month I've got a sensation for it that will boom the paper into a fortune! My future—our future—is assured! In a week's time every one will be talking of the Vulture and its editor."

"Possibly. It may be I shall be more enthusiastic when you are more explicit."

He threw down a card containing an electrifying address. On the front was a reproduction of John Chetwynd's photograph.

"That is Chetwynd, the Conservative candidate for East St. — I will adorn the pages of the Vulture next week. Chetwynd is wanted in Frisco for killing a man, as I happen to know, and I'm going to denounce him in my paper."

"And it will ruin him?" she said.

"Of course. I hate the man; I have good cause, and to-day I told him I meant to reveal the secret he believed buried forever. I am glad to be able to do him the worst turn he ever had in his life—and do myself the best!"

Listen to me, George Hurst.

"I see," she said, slowly. "Listen to me, George Hurst. If you breathe one word of your secret I'll break off my intended marriage with you!"

The ring of passion in her words was unmistakable evidence of her determination. Hurst was startled as he cried—

"What do you mean?"

"What I have said. I owe a debt to John Chetwynd. I have never told you the story—I don't talk much about myself, as you know. Eight years ago in Dieppe—long before I knew you, of course—that man risked his life to save mine. I'll tell you the story some day. I only saw John Chetwynd twice, for he left a day or so later—"

"Are you sure it is the same man?" he cried.

"Should I speak like this if I wasn't sure?" she said, scornfully. "Now choose if you will ruin him or not."

George Hurst's love was strangely deep and real considering the manner of man he was. He had set his heart upon the latter retaliation that would have ruined the man he hated, but his love for her was stronger than his wild desire for revenge. He answered:

"As far as I am concerned he shall go scot free."

As Ethel Lyster had said, she owed a debt of gratitude to John Chetwynd—but, it might have been thought, hardly a debt of gratitude. For this woman was the girl to whom Chetwynd had "behaved shabbily."

And the story she told was a lie invented on the spur of the moment to save the man who had injured her.

On the following morning John Chetwynd received two letters. One ran thus:

You behaved like a blackguard once to some one, though possibly you have forgotten all about the woman whose heart you nearly broke, because she was weak enough to give all her love to a man who did not think it worth having. But I cannot forget that I loved you, and for the memory of that old love I have saved you from what would have ruined your career. I am marrying a man I dislike because I am poor and hate poverty—my future husband's name is George Hurst, and I have sealed his lips.

ETHEL LYSER.

The other letter was much shorter

I have changed my mind. Your secret is safe in my keeping.

GEORGE HURST

Bill's Mistake

Original

"Bill's got quite an eye on him this mornin'," remarked the man with the hod, pausing at the mortar box to wipe the honest dew of toil from his brow.

"I noticed that myself," said the man with the hoe.

"He don't act like a fightin' man," said the hodcarrier. "I'd took him for a feller 'at wouldn't git into no trouble he could keep out of."

"He ain't a fightin' man," said the man with the hoe. "He's a married man. She done it. She's a terror, all right. If I was Bill I'd do one o' two things; I'd take a pick handle some time to her or else I'd quit her."

"No you wouldn't," said the man with the hod. "That wouldn't be no way to do. Takin' a pick handle to a woman ain't no way to reform her, an' if you quit her you'd have trouble."

"You don't know the kind o' woman Bill's got," said the man with the hoe. "I've lived neighbors with 'em for nigh on to a year, an' I do. Jest as soon as he gets home she starts to chewin' the rag an' she don't give him no peace from that till he comes out to work ag'in. I've seen him come out o' the house many's the time with half o' the kitchen dishes streakin' after him. She don't think nothin' o' throwin' a stove lid at him. Some o' these days she'll aim straight an' then there'll be an inquest."

"He don't handle her right," said the man with the hod, positively.

"That's what I'm tellin' you. He ought to pickhandle her."

"I don't mean that. I mean he don't use no judgment. I don't have no trouble with my woman, an' I never took a pick handle to her either. When I git home there's my supper waitin' for me on the table good an' hot, an' never a cross word atwixt us. What's the reason? I know how to manage her. A woman ain't hard to manage if you go about it right."

"Sure," agreed the man with the hoe sarcastically. "It's as easy as making $10 a day. You git a woman like Bill's got the next time you get one an' then come around an' let me know how it goes."

"I don't know what kind o' woman Bill's got," retorted the man with the hod, "but I know I could handle her all right. If Billy has trouble with her he's got to handle himself to blame for it. If Billy's woman has got any worse tongue than what my woman's got if she gits stirred up, I'd like to stand off somewhere an' hear it, jest out o' curiosity. That's what. If she can think of meaner things to say an' say 'em louder I'd like to hear her, an' if she can keep at it longer I'd like to time her an' give her the world's champion medal when she gits through. An' when it comes to backin' up what she says—say, what does Billy's wife weigh?"

"About a hundred'n thirty, I'd judge," replied the man with the hoe.

"My woman weighs a hundred an' seventy-eight, an' she's as quick as a cat," said the man with the hod. "If she lands on you you'll know it, all right, I've seen her pick up her cook stove and carry it out into the summer kitchen as easy as if it was a basket o' clo'es. All the same, you don't see me comin' to work with a black eye or dodging stove lids."

"Maybe your wife ain't got that ugly disposition," hazarded the man with the hoe.

"She's got her days when she ain't feelin' right good, jest the same as any o' 'em," said the man with the hod. "But then's the days I step around extra soft an' keerful. I could git trouble if I wanted it an' git it easy an' plenty, but I don't. There's jest one way to do with a woman like that. Handle her right. If she wants to do anythin' let her do it an' don't make no bones about it an' if she wants to do it prompt an' cheerful, an' she won't be hard on you. When we was first married we had our little difficulties, same's most people, but I soon see what was the right way to handle her."

"That's all right if you want a woman to boss you," said the man with the hoe.

"Boss nothin'," said the man with the hod, indignantly. "She don't never try to boss me. If I give in to her it's because I want to."

The Sleeping Sickness.

How important it is that a remedy should be discovered for sleeping sickness may be judged from Dr. Todd's estimate, drawn from his investigations on the West Coast of Africa for the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, that in ten years the mortality in Africa from the disease has been from 400,000 to 600,000 persons.

Is Then Eaten.

The oyster lives from hand to mouth in all this portion of the South; in fact, to make the statement stronger.

It doesn't live a minute longer!

Religion in Australia.
The progress of the Catholic Church in Australia is perhaps the most striking religious fact in modern history. There are men living who remember the time when there was not one priest on the Australian continent.

The Austrian's Handicap.
Austria's fishing industry suffers from the handicap that the fishermen are nearly all in the clutches of usurers. They are compelled to borrow money when the catch is poor, and they are never able to get out of debt again.

South Needs Immigrants.
Only four out of every 100 immigrants who land at New York go to the Southern States. The South is crying loudly for them, too, and there is a bright future for the Swedes and other hard-working people on Southern plantations.

Rings on Their Fingers.
The hands of female mummies found in the tombs of Egypt are literally covered with rings, in many instances there being from two to six on every finger.

A Garden of Hyacinths.
The Sultan of Turkey has a whole garden exclusively devoted to hyacinths of different kinds.

ADVANTAGE OF TRAILERS.

Street Car System Which Works Well in Denver.

In the West, where electric traction has reached a high stage of development, trail cars to take care of the rush-hour loads have become regular features.

The great advantage of the trail car from the standpoint of the operating company is its small operating cost compared to a tripper, since the "platform cost" is only one-half, and the power consumption for a car seating practically the same number of people as the motor car is less than 50 per cent. additional.

To the public it means experienced men to handle the motor car and regular schedules. In Denver, where this system is in vogue, center door-way cars have been adopted, it being claimed for them that the conductor is always within half a car length of the door, and the passengers can get out or in in about half the usual time, since they only have to travel half the distance required by end doors.

Want Bogus Mining Stock.

"Wildcat mining stocks are not altogether useless—or worthless, either," said a New York broker who handles cheap mining stocks the other day as he hung up the telephone receiver. "Here's a man who just offered me $50 for enough mining stocks to have a face value of $50,000. He wasn't particular what stocks he got if they only had a paper value of $50,000. I closed the deal and shall make money on it, too. What did he want with such stocks? Well, I haven't the slightest doubt but that he is getting ready to go into bankruptcy court and wants to show his creditors where his money has been dropped. We often get such requests and are usually able to fill them."

How Anarchist's Work.

A Russian Journal tells the story of how the murderer of General Luntz, prefect of St. Petersburg, obtained admission to the semi-official party at which the deed was committed. After the crime all the guests were detained and their tickets were examined. There was one ticket the rightful owner of which was not present. It was no other than that of Premier Stolypin himself. The murder was committed under cover of the invitation ticket of no less a personage than the Prime Minister. The Premier had not been able to go and his ticket fell into the hands of a member of the secret police named Nakolene. He resold it to the revolutionists for $16,000.

Weight Sustained by Beams.

It has been established that a load, may break eventually if the wooden beam, which for a short period will sustain safely a certain load remains. For instance, wooden beams have been known to break after 15 months under a constant load of only 60 per cent of that required to break them in an ordinary short test. There is little definite and systematic knowledge of the influence of the time element on the behavior of wood under stress.

Ways of Moorish Civilization.

A writer in National Review says of Moorish civilization: "It is something so apart so alone, this Moorish civilization; these great houses, this luxury of horses, servants, living and leisure, this beauty of architecture, creating buildings impossible to reproduce anywhere else; this literature, bigoted and restricted as it is, but existing utterly self-sufficient."

In the Kaiser's Stable.

The Kaiser has recently got after his master of horse and is looking after his stables a bit himself. He found that he was employing four men whose only duty was to braid the tails and manes of the imperial horses. He dismissed all four. Then he found that 400 men were employed to care for 350 horses and 240 carriages, and more heads fell.

PERSONAL

Dr. W. M. McGaughey and George Landes will go to Anderson tomorrow to bring to this city the latter's with her daughter for several weeks who has been ill for some time of typhoid fever. Mrs. Landes has been with her daughter for several weeks.

Dr. W. M. McGaughey has been appointed special surgeon for the Ohio and Indiana Stone Company which has just begun crushing operations in the quarry west of town.

Mrs. James Hurst is confined to the house by grip.

Mrs. Tom Halton who has been ill is improving slowly.

Miss Anna O'Brien has returned from a visit at Chicago and Hammond.

Mrs. Belle Hinkle spent Friday with her sister, Mrs. Hersey of Fillmore who is ill.

O. H. Smith went to Indianapolis yesterday to attend a banquet of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity of which he is a member.

The family of Agent Reed of the Monon arrived from Lafayette Friday and will occupy the Mullinix property on Hanna street.

A special from Washington says: "Roy H. Dobell of Indiana was appointed today to a position in the office of the supervising architect of the treasury at $840 a year." Mr. Dobell is a son of Prof. T. J. Dobell of this city and has many friends here who will be pleased at the recognition of his ability in his profession.

The Monday Club will meet Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wm. Vandiver on South College Avenue.

Miss Pearl Newgent was among Indianapolis visitors yesterday.

George W. Smith was in Terre Haute on business yesterday.

T. J. McMillan has returned from Arcola, Ill., where he went several days ago to attend the funeral of a relative.

Misses Lena Boyd, Bathsheba and Vera Fisher were among Indianapolis visitors yesterday.

Evan Kern of Rockford, Ill., is the guest of Mrs. Lou Baker and other friends in this city.

The funeral of Theodore Ash, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ash, who died of gastritis Thursday was held at two o'clock this morning. Rev. J. M. Walker of Locust Street Church conducting the services.

Mrs. H. M. Smith attended a banquet of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority at the Claypool Hotel at Indianapolis yesterday. Mrs. Smith is a charter member.

Justice W. J. Ashton slipped and fell on the sidewalk in front of the postoffice Saturday morning and was very painfully injured in his right side and arm. However the injuries were not of such magnitude as to require the attendance of a surgeon.

The suit of Elias H. Helton vs the Brazil Block Coal Company for damages in the sum of $20,000 for personal injuries has been sent form Clay to Putnam on a change of venue. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant negligently failed to furnish props and that he was compelled to work in a place of danger; that the roof fell and he was injured about the head, neck and body.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hays were in Indianapolis yesterday.

E. B. Lynch is home from a business trip to Cincinnati.

In the rush about a newspaper office at the time of closing the forms some very serious mistakes are sometimes made. The headlines over the account of the 87th anniversary of Mrs. Nancy Ferrel in Friday's Herald were very misleading, reading in such a way as to lead to the belief that Mrs. Ferrel was dead. Mrs. Ferrel is not dead, very far from it. In fact, nor was it the intention of the Herald to commit a homicide.

The make-up man in his rush misread the copy that was sent to him, the proof reader failed to catch the error and while the body of the item was correct, the heading was very misleading. The result was that quite a large number of people who evidently take a great deal of stock in a heading, called up Prosecutor Hughes Friday and last night to inquire in regard to his grandmother.

Borneo Superstition's

The natives of Borneo place rude carved images of female figures by the side of the entrances to their huts. The image represents a god, which protects the house from any harm or sickness. If there should be illness previous to the placing of the building at the entrance she prevents it from becoming worse.

World's Silk Industry.

The ancient city of Lyons, the third city in France, with a population of 500,000, lies with Milan in importance in the world's silk industry. No fewer than 40,000 people, men, women and children, are employed in the factories.

Fogs and Sandbanks.

Fogs are common over sand-banks because shallow water covering sand-banks is colder than the deep sea. The Bay of Newfoundland fogs are aggravated by the warm Gulf Stream running into this layer of cold water.

INTERESTING GROUPS OF MEETINGS PLANNED

A group of meetings which it is hoped will be of great interest and value to the community has been planned for Locust Street Church for the week beginning with Feb. 14th. The meetings will consist of studies five denominations in the world. Five men representing the five denominations which are formally at work among the white people of this city will give successive evenings present in forty-five minute addresses the mission of their respective denominations in the world. The thought underlying the meetings is that these and all Christian denominations are branches of the one great universal church and that it will be distinctly advantageous for these denominations to understand each other better as well as for the non church belonging public to gain a juster conception of them. It is hoped that the meetings will promote denominational self consciousness and self respect, while at the same time entrancing mutual appreciation and inter-denominational co-operation, by showing the distinctive contribution which each denomination was designed to make and is making to the life of the world and also the fundamental unity of aim and spirit which underlies their characteristics.

The meetings will last one hour each, and will begin at 7:30. They are to be open without charge to all, but a silver offering will be received each evening to pay for the expenses.

It will be seen at a glance that the good taken from them will depend on unbroken attendance.

The following is the program:

Tuesday, Feb. 15—"The Mission of the Christian Church," by Rev. J. M. Rudy, pastor of the Christian Church in Greencastle.

Wednesday, Feb. 16—"The Mission of the Presbyterian Church," by the Rev. Don D. Tullis, of the Washington Church in Terre Haute.

Thursday, Feb. 17—"The Mission of the Roman Catholic Church," by the Rev. Father M. H. Begemann, pastor of the church of St. Charles, Bloomington, Ind.

Friday, Feb. 18—"The Mission of Methodism," by the Rev. Albert J. Hursthouse, pastor of the Roberts Park M. E. Church, Indianapolis.

It will be well worth while for all the people to come out and attend these meetings.

UNCLE HIRAM TO HIS NEPHEW.

Showing Him Just How He Can Be Certain of Getting a Square Deal.

"If we fail, Henry," said Uncle Hiram to his hopeful young nephew, "you may be sure that we owe it as a rule not to our limitations or to lack of opportunities but to our lack of thoroughness to our not using the talents we have to the best advantage. It is an old old story Henry, but however old a story may be it still remains new to those who hear it for the first time; and are not new hearers coming into hearing all the time, to whom everything the whole world is new? Now let me say this again for your benefit.

"When I see the window cleaner falling to get down into the corners to dig out there, failing to make a perfect job of his work, I know not only that he lacks inspiration, I know that he lacks the two simple essentials of application and thoroughness; he lacks the two elementary requirements for getting on in the world at all. As he grows older he will wonder why he doesn't get ahead faster and when dull times come he will wonder why he is laid off while other men are kept at work; and then, unless happily light should come to him, he'll get sour and discontented and in his own way cynical; he'll think that everything in the order of things is wrong, that he isn't getting a fair deal, when the fact is that every man is his own dealer.

"As it is about the window cleaner so it is with every one of us in whatever we may have to do. We all of us think we can do big things when, as we say, 'we get a chance'; but the truth is that unless we can do a big thing well and we never get a chance. Big things are made up of little things. If a man or a boy couldn't sweep a sidewalk clean nobody would think of hiring him to clean a city.

"Don't think you've got a mean job and slight it till you can get something better; no matter what your work may be, magnify it and dignify it by application and thoroughness. It is the only way to get on and in that way you'll be sure to get on. There's nothing the matter with the deal, Henry. Every man can have a square deal if he wants it hard enough for every man can deal for himself."

THE TRAMP THAT TRIED.

Up the long avenue to the summer house of the green gables, Georgie, the vagabond, lolled his idle way.

For awhile there was no answer to the tramp's ringing peal on the front door bell, and he twirled his peaked slouch hat and whistled. Then the door slid back and a young girl appeared. At sight of the unkempt vagabond, the maid drew back, with a little cry on her fresh, red lips and a little frown on her forehead.

Georgie, the vagabond, bowed low. The lady half-closed the door. "What do you want?" she asked.

"Madam," he said, airily, "I am a child of the great mother, Nature. I sleep in her compassing lap; I bathe in her clear, cold lavatories; I eat from her bountiful, many-coursed banquet tables. And I am happy, happy as the birds there, or—pardon me, madam—as happy as you, in your angelic innocence, can be. But, alas! Nature cannot clothe, that is, according to police regulations, and—And Georgie, the vagabond, ran his hand down his expensive of rags.

"The girl spoke, in abrupt sternness. "You hinted at bathing—"

"Why, yes," said Georgie, "but, in my rapt meditations, I have somewhat overlooked the matter, I fear." "Step around to the back door," commanded the girl.

The door slammed to and Georgie stroled around the house. In the rear he found the maid pointing dramatically at a blue tin pan. Georgie set vigorously to work and three separate times he dyed the clear water to a rich coffee hue. After the last rinsing, the lady brought a brush and comb and Georgie plied these with ardor. When the ordeal was over, the tramp stood forth fresh, smiling, confident.

The girl's face softened and she almost smiled. "I wonder," she murmured.

"Yes, you wonder," smiled Georgie, "and your kind wonders at all that is simple and primitive and next to the good, kind earth."

"But you were so dirty."

"I am a great, rough, sunflower, and you are a hot house plant," Georgie smiled, so entrancingly, that the little lady of the green gables smiled too.

"Oh, I would like your life," she cried. "And I like you. I must give you something, so that you will not forget me."

"If you will," declared Georgie, "some trifle—I shall never cease to remember."

"Here are two pins," she cried. "One is a diamond of price—the other a piece of green glass that I wore in nursery days. Which will you have?"

Georgie glowed with chivalry. "The glass!" he exclaimed, with dramatic emphasis; and, after a farewell almost tearful, he stroled down the shaded avenue and into the duty lane, with a keepsake of charm in a little box of pasteboard. Meanwhile the girl stood at the window in one of the green gables, and, with clenched fists and tear-filled eyes, watched the tramp go down the long road.

"If he only proves true," she sobbed, as she fondled a piece of gaudy green glass.

Down by the big stone gate, Georgie seated himself and proceeded to unfold his treasure. At the end of a long roll of cotton, he found a glittering diamond.

"Zounds!" said Georgie, softly, "she's put in the diamond by mistake. I must return it."

He started up, but sank back and mused irresolutely for some time. Then he rose and proceeded down the highway.

"After all," he muttered, "I tried to do right—and she knew." And he waved a solemn kiss back to the house of the green gables, where a disappointed maid wept bitterly.

WHY BIG TREES ARE BIG.

Heavy Rainfall Gives Quick Germination and Steady Growth.

The magnificent forests of Douglas fir in Washington—it is called Washington fir there and Oregon (its commercial name) in Oregon—do not have an equal anywhere else in the world. This is not surprising if we take into account the rainfall, which in the Puget Sound country is about fifty-three inches, while up in the higher Cascades near Seattle it is 100 inches and even reaches 120 inches.

Under such climatic conditions the seeds of trees germinate readily and all trees continue to make a vigorous growth. These great forests are Horticulture, are due to the climatic conditions of the region.

On the east slope of the Cascades the rainfall is much less, and here the bull pine is found, interspersed with beautiful white pines which some times reaches a height of 200 feet and a diameter of 6 feet although there are many trees over 100 feet high and 3 or 4 feet in diameter. The tree resembles our Eastern white pine, but is more slender and with slender spreading or somewhat drooping branches.

Bank Burglar's Tools.

According to a recent decision of the Kentucky Court of Appeals a bank cannot recover indemnity from a casualty or burglary insurance company in the case of robbery through intimidation of the cashier or other official.

It appears that the bank in this case had closed and the money had been locked in the safe, when robbers appeared, held up the cashier and forced him to open the safe. The casualty policy provided indemnity only in case after the bank had closed where entrance was made to the safe "by means of tools or explosives employed directly thereupon."

The bank claimed that the cashier formed a tool within the meaning of the policy but the court holds that more ordinary burglars' tools were meant.—Daily Eastern Argus.

Ants Have Combs.

No creature is more tidy than an ant, which cannot tolerate the presence of dirt on its body. These little creatures actually use a number of real toilet articles in keeping their selves clean. No less an authority than Dr. McCook says their toilet articles consist of coarse and smooth combs, hair brushes, sponges and even washes and soap. Their saliva is their liquid soap, and their soft tongues are their sponges. Their combs, however, are the genuine article and differ from ours mainly in that they are fastened to their legs. The ants have no set time for their toilet operations, but stop and clean up whenever they get soiled.—Nicholas.

"Do you consider plagiarism permissible under any circumstances?" "Well," answered Senator Sorghum, "it's pretty hard when you find yourself compelled to make a choice between being interesting or original."
